The farmers of Kentucky bave not as yet presented to the Legislature any bill which has for he purpose the protection of sheep and the other stock from the r vages of dogs. The State ne 'a a law to protect the sheep indu especially. Sheep breeding and raising have been profitable in . II of the States of this country wire the stock has been protected by simple safeguard measures and wb not in Kentucky, where the climate and the natural reso are of such a nature that the po est farmer in the state may relied small flock without expense and with profit? The dog however is in the way of the small breeder. who cannot house his flock at n the Legislature should protect th property of the people of the stat from ravege by dogs and in no way can that body render a greater service to the farmers, large and small than by passing a law which will give them immunity for their property from the ravages of animals which give neither protection nor profit to their owners .- Covington Commonage to

NO. 3.

"In the mountains of Kentucky whose people have been the obw for the time of the jects of much unmerited abuse, I fording at most all and have been charged with lawlessness and crime you will find a most favorable condition of affairs. The public officials there doing their utmost to enforce the law and the people, begining to realize the rices McIntosh, who vast riches locked in their moun por health for tains are offering every opportu-Gwhat improv- nity and inducement for the investment of capital and the opening up of this vast unexplored field of natural wealth. There is no reason why it should not be done, and we may confidently look forward to a wonderful advancement in that part of the State in the next few years.
